CEI gives power to pictures, showcasing projects where creative use of concrete is centre stage.

Devoid of their usual inhabitants, the undulating bowls, sloping half-pipes and cavernous barrels of the skate parks dotting stretches of California are works of art in the eyes of photographer Amir Zaki.

(All images: Amir Zaki.)

Amir Zaki is a practising artist living in southern California who has been regularly exhibiting nationally and internationally since 1999. He has had over 30 solo exhibitions at institutions. His new photo-book, California Concrete: A Landscape of Skateparks, features photos of 12 major skate parks throughout the Golden State. The Brutalist structures that emerge at these sites, from San Jose's Lake Cunningham to Linda Vista in San Diego, fill a void in landscape photography and capture a pivotal cultural moment.
